

Aikido Shimbokukai Code of Ethics

The Aikido Shimbokukai is an organization of instructors, dojos, and aikido practitioners whose common bond is the practice and development of Aikido. This group strives to bring people together for the exchange of experiences and ideas through Aikido training, and to provide instruction and guidance while maintaining standards of instruction and training. We endeavor to stay apolitical and broad-minded, welcoming those interested in sharing and developing Aikido within our guidelines together.

The Aikido Shimbokukai Code of Ethics (Code) represent an effort to set minimum expectations for all members. Senior ranking members and instructors are held to higher standards than beginners.

Integrity

All members should treat others with kindness and respect. Instructors must promote the health, safety, and welfare of their students, and never exploit their positions as respected leaders. All members' conduct should reflect favorably on the organization.

Responsibility

All members have a responsibility to support and positively impact one another, their dojo, and the organization.

Competence

All members have an obligation to diligently pursue training and teaching expectations for self-improvement and the betterment of other members, their dojo, the organization, and society.

Legal Standards

Aikido Shimbokukai explicitly prohibits discrimination, exploitation, or harassment based on age, gender, sexual preference, handicap, religion, socio-economic status or national origin subject to the applicable laws and regulations of the jurisdiction(s) where activities are conducted.

Membership is a Privilege

Membership in Aikido Shimbokukai is a privilege. Aikido Shimbokukai leadership may, in their sole discretion, terminate or suspend the membership of any instructor or student that violates this Code of Ethics.
